

-----Original Message-----

From: db
Sent: Saturday, March 13, 2004 9:06 PM
To: Jay DeVincentis
Subject: Re: Daily Stock Barometer #303

Jay

I just want to say kudos on the way you conduct your business. I plugged into you guys via another service. I had seen your marketing materials previous to that but did not find a reason to subscribe.

I have been in high tech for a 20+ year career, now rely on trading and investing to make my living. I applaud the lucid way you explain your formulations, and the degree of care about the customer that you show. It comes through "between the lines". I pray that you do not succumb to the corruption the gets so many technical guys as they become rich and famous! Keep looking out for small people that must build financial independence.

I read your every note!
db

I use the low price stocks you recommend. I have had very favorable results.

I would like to see more of the same.

In fact, after a good stock has broken out to the upside and we have a deep correction forecasted in the near future I will put in GTC limit orders to buy the stocks when they takes a hit.

It is a second chance to pick up the same stocks at a depressed price for a short time.

Keep up the good work.

John

Original Message-----

From: Verena
Sent: Thursday, November 06, 2003 8:52 PM
To: Jay DeVincentis

Subject: Gold stocks and low priced stocks

Hi

I have been following your analysis for a few months and specifically enjoy your daily buy/sell barometer. The analysis provided is just great; I have learned a lot by reading your daily and weekly reports. Thanks Stock Barometer.

And yes, I am looking forward to your gold recommendations, have been waiting for it for the last two weeks.

My interest lies particularly with the juniors: BGO, CDE, MNG, HL and above all WHT. Also GSS, ASL, HMY.

Any in-depth analysis and price targets will be much appreciated.

Low priced stocks: I have not traded your recommendations so far, just followed them during last summer. Highly interesting.

Regards

Verena

From: "Charlie"
Subject: Fw: QQQ Chart for 11/14/03
Date: Sat, 15 Nov 2003 08:55:17 -0500
To: "Jay DeVincentis"

Just to let you know how I'm using your information, I'm forwarding the following e-mail on the QQQ chart. One year ago, after buying the latest recommended small cap stocks, and watching them decline after an initial surge, usually selling them at a loss, then trading both the Rydex SP500 and Nasdaq 100 based funds, I now limit myself to just the QQQ based funds. They track the Dow and SP500 remarkably closely, with about 50% more action. This makes it simple for me, only the QQQ to follow closely. I trade the Rydex dynamic funds directly with Rydex ($25,000 minimum), and also in E*TRADE and BrownCo ($2500 minimum) accounts.

Many thanks for you tip on BGO. I bought some and it is doing very well, as well as a gold fund (FGLDX) in my mother-in-law's AIM (INVESCO) mutual fund account.

The M predictions are from his by-weekly report with a little fudging on the tops and bottoms (using Up-Dn Osc when Price is not given). They look similar to your 6-9 day moves: a bottom 11/19-20 and a top on 11/24 (3), a bottom on 12/2 (7), a top on 12/15 (9), a bottom on 12/26 (8). Of course some of his tops and bottoms is a pause in the direction they are going in at the time. These values are revised by his and your daily reports.

This chart is from stockpoint/brownco, and they picked the values Bollinger MA30 (about 4 days), STOCH %K, 3; %D 10; MACD: Slow 10, Fast 30. The Stochastics appears to predict the action slightly (2 to 7 hours), whereas the MACD appears to confirm what has happened after 2-3 hours, which is important because we really don't know if the market will continue in the new direction.

From: "Hersh"
Subject:
Date: Sun, 16 Nov 2003 14:16:13 -0500
To: Jay DeVincentis

Hi Jay-

This was the first time I read your complete report.

I'm writing to thank you for a very thorough and clear description of your current thinking and reasoning.

Take good care.

Hersh

From: "Michael"

Subject: Nice Profit Taking Today!!!

Date: Thu, 20 Nov 2003 10:27:57 -0500

To: Jay DeVincentis

-----Original Message-----

From: ozzy

Sent: Thursday, November 20, 2003 10:57 AM

To: Jay DeVincentis

Subject: Question 4 Jay

hi Jay,

i'm from holland and only recently starting reading your newsletter. Followed 2 rec. bought BGO at 3.03, sold at 4.04 and bought RTK at 0.88 sold 1.20. Tks.

a quick question: as a individual trader (trading via offshore ac) , how can i participate in rydex bear funds? its not open to retail investors? especially for offshore broking acs. Are there any ETFs i can used?

rgds

ozzy

From: "Bruce"
Subject: Question on 11/23 update
Date: Sun, 23 Nov 2003 12:27:46 -0600
To: "Jay DeVincentis"

Hi Jay,

We have never met but I almost feel like I'm addressing an old friend as I always look forward to each update. I feel that you try your very best to help your readers. And I suspect that you really just like helping people period.

Sometimes though I have a bit of a struggle trying to figure out exactly what you are trying to say or what you are trying to show us. Example: In your last update, you show a chart for XAU. You then state, " The XAU should retrace to confluence". Which number is confluence...the number pointed to by your arrow (98.5347) or the number that you have bolded to the right (99.478)? What does the other no. represent? What is the bolded 104.46? Also, 38.2% is listed after both the 98.5347 and the 100.8572 levels. I hope you see my point. That's a lot of questions for just one chart (and believe it or not, I'm a pretty bright guy).

May I give you a suggestion? Please list the number that you intend to convey right in the sentence. Example: "The XAU should retrace to confluence (xx.xxxx)..."

Another example: You show a chart on the SPY. Under the chart you state, "I expect the market to make a push at the 20 day moving average and fail at that level". What is the 20 day moving average? Is it the black line that ends at 105.207? Probably so but your chart doesn't indicate that. Even if it did, your readers would have to stop reading and scroll back on the e-mail to find out what it was and the scroll back down again. Including the number, "I expect the market to make a push at the 20 day moving average (105.207) and fail at that level" makes things clearer and easier for your readers. (Also, what is the bolded 104.21 represent? What does 104.49 in blue represent? If your not going to mention them they are probably best left off of the chart).

I hope this feedback is of value to you. Finally, everything does not have to be perfect. I read your daily schedule and I don't know how you do it! Keep up the good work.

Best regards,
Bruce

From: "VERN"
Subject: Excellent Editorial today
Date: Sun, 14 Dec 2003 13:26:43 -0500
To: Jay DeVincentis

Jay,
Just wanted to let you know that you had an excellent write up today (Dec 14th). You did an excellent job putting everything into proper perspective. Thanks Vern

From: "Bill"
Subject: sp guess
Date: Sun, 14 Dec 2003 12:40:59 -0500
To: Jay DeVincentis

1128...again, thanks for your detailed reports..bill b

Original Message-----

From: Leonel
Sent: Monday, December 15, 2003 10:48 AM
To: Jay DeVincentis
Subject: 3x3 dma

can you explain the components of the 3x3 dma, I am fairly new to your service and I have noticed that you frequently mention this. I did look at your FAQ on the web site but I guess everyone else knows what you are talking about, as I did not find a question there.

I look forward every day to reading your emails, since coming on I have made quite a few $$$ on your recommendations and insights.

Leonel

From: "Shane"
Subject: Your service and advice
Date: Fri, 19 Dec 2003 11:13:43 -0500
To: jay devincentis

Jay,

Just wanted to write you a quick note and thank you for your advice and service. You had made a recommendation to check out another service and I have. I am trying to understand as much as I can so that I can be an informed investor. I feel like some of the things you talk about in your site are still challenging to me and some of the catch words and phrases are still hard to understand. But I am working on it. Your service is very thorough and I appreciate what you are doing.

Anyway I just wanted to thank you, encourage you, and wish you and your family and staff a blessed Christmastime.

Shane

From: "Patrick"
Subject: Message from the markets
Date: Sun, 21 Dec 2003 17:48:37 -0000
To: Jay DeVincentis

Keep up the good work.

I really look forward to your Sunday message every week.

What I like the most about your site is that you track the good and the bad in your decision making an aim to make sure that we all learn from the bad.

I too am on the wrong side of some rytpx and ryvnx positions but will watch with interest how you will extricate yourself from them.

The short term 6-9 day swing trading system with a bit of insurance is what really interests me so any developments in that game would be very interesting.

Pat

from Ireland.

P.S. Any predictions on the $vs € exchange rate over say 1,6,12 and 24 months.

Happy Christmas to you and yours.

From: "Jim"
Subject: RE: Rationale behind your Buy Points
Date: Mon, 22 Dec 2003 03:49:34 -0600
To: "Jay Devincentis"

Jay,

Tks for your prompt reply. I really appreciate it.

It's great that you are willing to participate in give-and-take dialogues with your subscribers.

There are lots of seasoned traders with subscription web sites who are not willing to pass along their skills to interested subscribers.

Keep up the good work. Looking forward to seeing the course you are developing.

Happy Holidays.

Jim

From: Dick
Subject: WOW !
Date: Fri, 26 Dec 2003 23:10:57 EST
To: Jay DeVincentis

Dear Jay,

I looked through your "Special Reports" section, and noticed your update on 5 Penny Stock you recommended for those interested. The update was dated 5/22/02.

CPHD, short of doubling; EARTH, down hill the full 20 months; LBIX, close to 100% first 10 months; SCLD, last 6 months, up about 60%. But then the winner TALK, WOW, did it ever talk. These were before my time. Hopefully, you may have a few of these again back in your mind that you might just do the same thing. Please let us know.

Dick

From: "JOHN"
Subject: Trade Spread Sheet Request
Date: Sun, 4 Jan 2004 23:26:29 -0700
To: Jay DeVincentis

Jay,

Thanks for all of your candid commentary on your retrospection and analysis of the year just past.

I agree with your modifications, and the KISS principle I have found is a rare but powerful and necessary attribute in successful trading.

As another service subscriber, I too struggle with trying to keep it simple. However, your newsletter is one of the select few that I follow within their (too many) offerings.

Thanks you for sending your trade spreadsheet to the above email address.

My "registered" address is Y, but is running FULL, so this address above is preferred to receive your trade log.

Thanks again for your candid commentary of your 2003 performance.

Wishing you all the BEST in 2004!!!

John

From: "David"
Date: Mon, 5 Jan 2004 09:47:17 -0500
To: Jay DeVincentis

Thanks for efforts on behalf of your subscribers.

From: Elio
Subject: New Years Resolution!
Date: Mon, 5 Jan 2004 13:23:49 EST
To: Jay DeVincentis

Dear Jay:

I would like to thank you for you analysis and commentaries. They have helped keep a perspective on the market.

My resolution for this year is to be more patient when buying back stocks I've sold during a downturn in the market. With your analysis, combined with my own feeling, I have been able to sell at the start of the downwave. However I still cannot be patient enough and wait longer before I begin buying back the stocks. They quickly begin looking so cheap. If I can be more patient, I can make some money. My new years resolution is to be dominate the impetuousness of impatience thereby being more patient,

Elio

From: David
Subject: Bravo...
Date: Sun, 25 Jan 2004 08:40:52 -0800
To: Jay DeVincentis

Hello Jay,

I've been reading your work (and have offered comments in the past) for about a year. I've noticed the changes you've made to your presentation and the efforts you've made to be clear about your thinking and methods. Your work is now a lot more accessible - therefore useable - therefore meaningful - therefore profitable - and therefore indispensable.

Well done...

Regards,

David

From: "john"
Subject: Gday Mate
Date: Sun, 25 Jan 2004 19:47:15 +0000
To: jay devincentis

Hello Jay,

Long time no speak. I'm John the Australian in the Persian Gulf spoke to you a few times when Iraq war started.

Just wanted to let you know that I really needed to here you intro in this week's message from the markets. You are dead right. It's so easy to loose faith in you system when you have a run of failures. One thing i am coming to understand is the during this up run which i believe is not very common and is causing most systems to fail during this time, especially contrarian type systems. Indicators just keep staying overbought, Sentiment indicators keep staying negative / extreme but the market keeps going up with occasional pauses. Cycles are either not in phase of just being ignored. It seems there is a lot against technical analysis. The only strategy's that seem to be working are the simple price action breakout systems. Ironic its what my first trading systems where based on during the tech run late 90's. You are right keep chugging along trading and learning / tweaking your trading systems.

Sorry about the rave but you touched a spot that helped me reiterate what trading is all about. Thanks

Once again thanks for sharing you information and have a nice day

John

-----Original Message-----

From: John
Sent: Monday, January 26, 2004 8:25 AM
To: Jay DeVincentis
Subject: Re: Trade Update & Alert #291

Sorry for my ignorance but what is 3x3? If you can tell me where it's explained, that would help. Thanks and enjoy (and have profited) with your updates.

John

From: "Dean"
Subject: Long term use of StockBarometer
Date: Tue, 27 Jan 2004 21:06:41 -0000
To: Jay DeVincentis

Hi Jay

I love your service, which I get as part of another service. I trade in many time frames, short to long and was just about to buy some index mutual funds when I remembered reading something from you last year. In your archives I found message from the market #70, where you talk about using the stockbarometer to get good long term entry prices. I am going to hold off buying for the moment.

My question is: Do you ever flag these long term buys? I don't remember seeing one lately and don't often see the 13 period MA.

Keep up the good work, I hope you are making a good living out of this as I like to see the good guys win.

Kind Regards
Dean

-----Original Message-----

From: Daniel

Sent: Wednesday, February 04, 2004 9:57 AM

To: Jay DeVincentis

Subject: Re: ON TGAL...

Jay,

I am a new subscriber...a quickie on hitting stops...TGAL went below, and came back up to what was the stop (3.32) and now seems to be resistance...I do have time to day trade...what are your thoughts on it? out? or end of day? it did get hit hard at the open...

I found your service to be EXTREMELY valuable...

thanks much...

and a good day trading...

dan

From: "chuck"
Subject: Trading
Date: Wed, 4 Feb 2004 18:12:04 -0500
To: Jay DeVincentis

Jay

I'm a brand new subscriber, but also a new believer. I know that one or two trades does not make one an expert, but it feels good to know the market is going in the way you thought it would. On Jan. 26th following your alert I shorted the QQQ, nine days later I sold the position for an 80% gain including commission. Thanks for your brilliant call and insight.

Chuch

From: "Dan"
Subject: Re: FW: ON TGAL...HEY THANKS!!!
Date: Wed, 4 Feb 2004 15:23:26 -0800
To: "Jay Devinentis"

Hey, man, what a surprise...a reply SOOOOO quick...

I've subscribed to other services before, and shoot, I got a few questions, and emailed a few times, and got no replies whatsoever...

Thank you so much for responding...your stuff is really helpful...and I am following the recommendations religiously...

bug you more next time...

thanks again

good trading..

dan

From: "chuck"
Subject: Re: Trading
Date: Wed, 4 Feb 2004 18:21:53 -0500
To: "Jay Devinentis"

Yes , bought 10 contracts at .60 and sold them today for $1.10. Might have gotten out a little early but profit is profit. Tried to reenter on the 2nd of Feb. but didn't get the fill I wanted so missed making more $$$

Thanks again I know you put a lot of hours into your service, but it works Anxiously awaiting the next trade God Bless
Chuck

From: "Glenn"
Subject: Weekend Update #082
Date: Sun, 15 Feb 2004 11:37:18 -0500
To: Jay DeVinentis

Hello, Jay ?

First I want to congratulate you for your newsletter. Through another service, I read every issue you put out. Good job.

Second, I'd like to point out what I think might be an error in your 2/15/04 weekend update (#082). You claim that with roughly 30 swings per year to trade, [if] you're trading the QQQ and half of the trades result in a loss of 1% and the other half result in a gain of 3% then you're still looking at a 60% gain.? I think what you've done is take 15 x 3% minus 15 x

1% = 30 x (3%-1%) = 60%. I contend that, more correctly, you should account for the compounding nature of trading. Consequently, $(1.0+.03)^{15}$ times $(1.0-.01)^{15} = 1.03^{15}$ times $.99^{15} = 1.5580 \times 0.8601 = 1.3399$. Recognizing the compounding effects, one doesn't garner a 60% return ? merely a 34% return. This is still good, but not as good.

Similarly, the stock parameters: ?Now if you're trading a stock, where you're likely to risk an 8% loss for a 24% gain, well, you do the math ?? yields $(1.0+.24)^{15}$ times $(1.0-.08)^{15} = 1.24^{15}$ times $.92^{15} = 25.1956 \times 0.2863 = 7.2134$. Wow!! 621% compounded return!!

Clearly, if one can confidently rely upon correlative indicators to signal entry/exit zones into a stock that would provide 30 trades per year, half averaging a 24% profit and the other half averaging only an 8% loss, then that is the way to trade. 621% vs. 34% provides better than 18:1 leverage per year. Continuing that performance over a five and ten year span would yield, respectively, 4,522 and 20,450,000, more leverage!! Doable? Possibly not. But if the expected parameters are as you had laid out, the numbers ? including compounding effects ? lead to these results. The message? Trade the 24:8 stock setup, not the 3:1 index setup.

FWIW ? Glenn

From: <mike>
Subject: Re: Re: hi
Date: Sun, 15 Feb 2004 13:06:58 -0500
To: "Jay Devinentis"

thank you for your repsonse...this is a tough market..is any market "easy"???..and you are absolutly right about some of these scammasters out there..some big names too...all b s..you seem honest and sincere..good luck to you..mike

>
> From: "Jay Devinentis"
> Date: 2004/02/15 Sun PM 12:30:40 EST
> To: "Mike Coleman"
> Subject: Re: hi

>
> Mike,
> My outlook for a bounce on Tuesday am. At that point, > we'll evaluate the position.
> Jay D

>
> On Sun, 15 Feb 2004 09:53:31 -0500
> "Mike" wrote:
> >i'm not sure my first message got through...WHEN are you > >going short the QQQ from your current long??..you are > >vague about it..again..WHEN?..thank you..michael
>
>

From: John
Date: Sun, 15 Feb 2004 20:51:06 +0000

Date: Sun, 15 Feb 2004 20:51:06 +0000

To: Jay DeVincentis

Dear Jay,

I've never written to you in the year that I've subscribed to your service. I'm a middle aged father with a rather small nest egg, but have three children that I'm trying to put through college, and I'm looking to your Services to help me do that....retirement also, but that's another story.

Anyway, I want to let you know that as a VERY NOVICE stock trader, I appreciate the consistent "helper notes" that you show in italics under your core graphs. It certainly helps me stay focused on what they really mean.

I'm sure you have a lot of very sophisticated subscribers, who hate seeing it all the time, but for novices like myself.... they really help!

Thanks so much for your Services!

John

From: norisk

Subject: Options

Date: Sun, 15 Feb 2004 15:54:50 -0500

To: Jay DeVincentis

Hey Jay,

I have been reading your newsletter on and off for over a year now. But since you have gone through your transition period I have not missed a day. I am very proud of you for finding your way, being total honest about it and staying the course in your trading. Something I have not been able to do myself yet. While I don't trade a lot of your recommendations I look forward to reading your spin on the marketplace every day. I have also become more focused on Futures(another area I would like to converse with you on in the future because I know you traded them at one point and you TA would definitely come in handy here). My accounts are small so it doesn't pay for me to do a lot of the trades (qqq's and rydex on a 5000.00 account especially after a 25.00 commission). This is why I believe an option recommendation on the QQQ would be beneficial to small account traders.

More bang for the buck. Of course it can work the other way also. But buying options are real cheap now and we should be taking advantage of that.

Also some spreads for longer term positions would benefit us plus reduce cost as well as give us some protection of the trade going against us. I just wanted to point out one other item I read your newsletter through another service. With all the news letters that are the site there are only 2 I care to read on a daily basis Yours and another service. Keep up the good work and stay healthy.

Have a profitable day,

Greg

From: " ramsey"
Subject: SPY vs SPY
Date: Fri, 14 Nov 2003 21:07:38 +0300
To: "Jay DeVincentis"

Jay, Just for fun mention the start point for the competition. I don't think we have moved much. Up a little I guess. Say, according to max pain it doesn't seem like the market will go far next week either. By the way congrats on your low price stock and gold advisory. Pretty good timing on both. One day notice. Have a nice weekend. Regards, AJ

-----Original Message-----

From: ted
Sent: Sunday, November 16, 2003 12:34 PM
To: Jay DeVincentis
Subject: Re: Message from the Markets #069

Hi Jay-

I was reading your briefing just now, and the long-term barometer (first chart in this week's briefing) keeps sticking in my mind. I was wondering how much work you've done on interpreting larger patterns in the long-term barometer.

My first impression of this chart is that it is similar to another chart. I notice divergences, such as higher lows on the 13 day at the July/October/March bottoms. We now know that this had very positive implications for the market. This is the best example I can find, but there are other divergences on the chart where the patterns of the high or low on the oscillator clearly predicted a decent swing trade set-up.

What I take from this analysis is that if the 13 day can't make a higher swing high on this push up, we could be setting up for a decent tradable decline in the coming days / weeks. After that, we would need to see where the next swing low comes in, as there have been a series of higher lows on recent swing lows.

Any thoughts? I have found that your 3x3 moving average does a pretty good job of setting up trades (I started using that method for some of my trades- I focus on the DJX & XAU options). It would seem that if your barometer can be added to this trading system as a 'zoom out' confirming indicator, you've got quite a powerful system on your hands.

As always, thanks for the info.

Sincerely,
Ted

"Charlie"
Subject: another service
Date: Fri, 21 Nov 2003 19:56:57 -0500
To: "Jay DeVincentis"

Please let me know if you are still offering the 30-day trial (I recently received such an offer by e-mail ? wonder from whom you bought my name from ? since all my e-mail go through several types of anti SPAM detectors.

I signed up after a 60-day trial because I was doing so well by buying and selling the Rydex funds in the summer of 2002, in other words I earned the $360 in profits before I signed up for two years. I have more than doubled a $5,700 IRA account since then.

Charlie

I sent the following e-mail out with a copy of another service for Friday, November 21, 2003 to some six former members of a computer club Investment Special. If they contact me, I will forward their e-mails on to you, or they may contact you directly.

“If you always want news that the market is always going up, then you want the <another service>. I don't believe I've ever heard that he wants you to short the market. He always has an excuse in a down market on why it did not go up. Notice that all of the indicators he reports are almost always in the middle of the range. His reports are about as useful as all of the palaver on CNBC during the day.

Of all the market reports I read or review, two hold merit above the crowd. These are "Jay DeVincentis" , and "another service". These two reports actually pick dates and make recommendations to buy or sell. All others provide interesting analysis of the markets, with several making suggestions to buy or sell stock at various prices.

A basket of market and political reports are published by another service. From time to time, they offer a 30 day free trial for your review.

If you are interested, either contact them directly or e-mail me and I will forward your e-mail address to them.

Charlie

From: Mal
Subject: Oversold; Overbought
Date: Sat, 7 Feb 2004 09:32:40 EST
To: Jay DeVincentis

Jay,

Would you some time address (for many of us who continue to learn) what you do to determine oversold and overbought conditions. Or point us to the place where there is a good explanation. Many refer to these conditions so easily, and I, for one, feel lost. I appreciate your continuing good work and for your willingness to adapt your style as you see the need.

Thank you.

Mal

From: "Sonja"
Date: Sun, 8 Feb 2004 21:03:20 -0700
To: Jay DeVincentis

Dear Jay,

I just want to say that the letters you wrote on the 6th and 8th were very informative and a pleasure to read. I took a lot away from them educationally. I must admit that my job has been keeping me too busy the last 5 or 6 months to keep up with you daily, but lately you have been sounding good. Although it is difficult to know a person by reading a column, as opposed to having a face to face conversation, you seem to have more self-confidence. I know you were having some health problems awhile back and now it appears that you are doing well. I certainly don't want to get too personal, I just wanted you to know that it sounds like your health has improved and I hope that is the case.

The best to you and yours,
Sonja

-----Original Message-----

From: Don
Sent: Sunday, February 08, 2004 10:36 AM
To: Jay DeVincentis
Subject: Re: Message from the Markets #081

Dear Jay,

Really enjoy reading and following your trading methods. You knocked the cover off the ball with your write-up today, but you might check the dates you listed for the next cycle time top. You indicated the next top due between "Tuesday, 2/13 and Friday, 2/19." My calendar shows those days dates as Tuesday, 2/10 and Friday, 2/13.

By the way, have you seen Tom Cruise in the Last Samurai? I'm X-military and thought it was one of the best movies I have seen in years. The clarity, focus and discipline you use are clearly confirmed in the movie.

Good luck and keep up the great work. I appreciate the effort you make in helping other traders such as myself be more successful. Sharing is good, and you are a terrific example of a smart, successful man who cares for the success of others.

Don

From: "Lindsey"
Subject: Gold
Date: Sun, 15 Feb 2004 19:47:34 -0500 (Eastern Standard Time)
To: Jay DeVincentis

i copied this from someone but would like your input on there position. I have been trading your gold picks (very successfully) and have concerns about this statement. Would appreciate any feed back Thank you

From: "Dave"
Subject: Service...
Date: Mon, 16 Feb 2004 00:09:53 -0500
To: Jay DeVincentis

Jay,

I like the new additions you've put on the daily reports, i.e. the explanations italicized for each topic/indicator. I also like how you are now mentioning more often where we are in the 6-9 day cycle. I had trouble following it before.

The newsletter seems to keep getting better. Your comments about letter writers changing their time frames hit home with me. I wrote you once before telling you that I did not like the name. I still don't, but that's a petty issue!!! You are one of my core followings.

Dave

-----Original Message-----

From: Ruby
Sent: Sunday, February 15, 2004 3:46 PM
To: Jay DeVincentis
Subject: Interested in an option service

I would be interested in an option service.

Also, I enjoy your in depth analysis of the markets, which is better than what most other services offer.

Ruby

From: Ted
Subject: Newsletter Feedback
Date: Mon, 23 Feb 2004 16:44:40 -0500
To: Jay DeVincentis

Hi Jay,

Wanted to give you some feedback on what a subscriber is doing with the info you provide. I day trade mini-Dow futures, and am finally starting to get into a profitable groove.

My preferred method is to pick a 'side' for the day, such that all my trades on a given day will be long or short. I've found that using your daily barometer, I'm able to position myself correctly and have had very good success over the past month.

Granted, you are looking at a low sample size as I have only been doing this for a few months. But, I've been able to consistently pull ~30 dow points out per day for several weeks now.

Anyway, thought you may be interested to know what people are doing, other than just trading the SPYs & QQQs. Keep up the good work, and hopefully I'll be in the game long enough to send some more notes!

Ted

p.s. Don't tell <another service> (I subscribe to his service, as well), but I think you've been more on-the-money this year than he has.... Not that it's a competition, as long as we are all making $$!

From: Ted
Subject: Re: Newsletter Feedback
Date: Tue, 24 Feb 2004 09:58:42 -0500
To: "Jay Devinentis"

Jay,

You make an interesting point that helped 'sober me up.'

I've been trading for ~5 years and have gone 'full cycle' two times (start with small amount, run it up to something respectable in a small time frame, blow it ALL out). Classic gambler experience, right? Two years ago I made the commitment to get serious about this BUSINESS. I saved up a realistic grubstake, developed a very clear set of rules to follow focusing on risk control, and gave it another shot.

So far, so good. I realized from the tone of the note I sent, and your response, that I still tend to get carried away on 'good' days. I think that is the main danger facing me right now. I absolutely refuse to blow out again, and I spend most of my time focusing on how to reduce my losing trades and minimize my risk. However, I get too excited when things go my way. I find it difficult to mentally control myself when I am right.

I suppose it is a cruel irony that it is more difficult to be correct than incorrect. And perhaps coming to grips with this is part of developing as a trader. I was wondering if you had any advice on this matter? Or knew of any experts who've put out good material that I could reference?

Or, as I fear, is this just one of the hurdles one must conquer along the way? Stick to the rules at all costs and things will take care of themselves? Eventually you grow up and get used to it?

Just a few thoughts. I think it helps me to put it in writing.

Anyway, thanks for the feedback, and of course all the hard work & great analysis. Keep reminding us to never get too confident in this business!

Ted

From: "R. Y."
Subject: a suggestion on your daily barometer
Date: Thu, 26 Feb 2004 08:34:59 -0500
To: jay devinentis

Dear Jay,

It is great that you include the explanation in Italics everyday; this is very helpful to remind us the definition of the subject.

I would like to make a small suggestion that could you make the Italics font size 2 points smaller than the rest?

I have 2 reasons: 1) I usually print your column out and take it to read on my bus ride, so that could save some pages in the long run; 2) Right now it seems you have more spaces on the definition than your message.

The other possible way will be putting a hyperlink at the definition place, so that if we ever have doubt on the subject, there is always just a click away.

Thanks, and I truly enjoy and BENEFIT from your daily column.

R.Y.

--

Thank You! You may use my whole name. And while I have your attention I just want to say how much I look forward to reading your daily market email and your trading recommendations. You always seem to be just a lit bit ahead of others that I read in identifying the next trend.

Best regards and thanks again,

Leonel

----- Original Message -----

From: "Jay Devinentis"
To: "Leonel"
Sent: Monday, March 01, 2004 6:45 PM
Subject: Re: QQPN 3.45

> Leonel
> Congrats! - You won our Guess the QQPN contest and a free > year to my service.
> How would you like me to announce your win. I can use > your initials or your whole name - it's up to you.
> I'll hold off until I hear from you.
> Regards,
> Jay DeVinentis

-----Original Message-----

From: george
Sent: Friday, March 05, 2004 8:28 AM
To: Jay DeVinentis
Subject: Re: Daily Stock Barometer #298

Dear Jay,

I like your Daily Stock Barometer. I've a few days left on my free trial. I'll have to stay with you a couple of months more to follow a few more of your recommendations. I was already in BGO and I took the Drooy, skipped the qqq. We'll go from here.

I didn't miss your gray hair remark this morning.
george

-----Original Message-----

From: Tim

Sent: Monday, March 08, 2004 12:48 PM

To: jay

Subject:

just wanted to let know how much i love your qqq trades.

thanks,

Tim

-----Original Message-----

From: Ali

Sent: Friday, March 26, 2004 11:16 AM

To: Jay DeVincentis

Subject: 2 Questions

Hi Jay,

I have a couple of quick question:

1. I've found the section of you web site that talks about your Rydex Trading Strategy, but I have not found similar info regarding the trading strategy for QQQ (Swing trading). I've heard you mention both the break of RSI-5 trendline as well as 5-9 day cycles with stock barometer, but I'm not sure what your exact criteria for entry is. Can you specify what your swing trading strategy is, or point me to a location on your site that talks about it?

2. Regarding your stock barometer, can you tell me if it includes any price element (S&P?), or is purely derived from various breadth/sentiment indicators? The reason I ask is because I would like to use it along with my pure price analysis as a non-correlated indicator. Also, can you be a bit more specific about what goes into it? (w/o mentioning how it's calculated).

Thanks in advance. I appreciate your honest, straight forward approach. Your service is excellent, specially for the price :)

- Ali